11. Criteria for award and classification

This programme follows the standard scheme of undergraduate award and classification set out in Senate Regulations – see the version of Senate Regulation 5 governing undergraduate programmes relevant to the year of entry.

12. Special features

The programme is completely delivered by the School of Criminology and its academic members of staff with the curriculum being underpinned by staff with criminological and forensic psychological research expertise from within the School.

The programme has the Leicester Award embedded in the curriculum in Year 1, with the opportunity to complete Leicester Award Gold in Year 2. The final year core module CR3017 Being a Criminologist includes a significant employability experience.

The BSc includes a programme of non-credit bearing activities called ‘Succeed in your Studies’ which offer learning and teaching around: study skills, information literacy skills, course-specific skills, employability skills, and extra-curricular activities. This programme runs throughout the first and second years of the programme and will enhance students learning experience.

The course has a clear focus on Research Methods, with 60 credits in the second year dedicated to Understanding and Doing Criminological Research and 60 credits in the third year – 30 credits involve a combination of employability and also enabling students to prepare for their dissertation and 30 credits for the dissertation.

The programme offers students the opportunity to engage with relevant practitioners through guest lectures, field trips, volunteering, and careers events (according to the current COVID situation).

13. Indications of programme quality

The Research Excellence Framework (REF) 2014 results show that vast majority of research within the School of Criminology was judged to be of global significance. 85% of our research activity was rated as world-leading or internationally excellent. The School also demonstrated the strong public impact of its research with 100% being judged internationally excellent.

The Destination of Leavers from Higher Education (DELHE) data shows that 93.5% of 2015-16 graduates were in employment or further study, with 65.2% in full-time employment (compared with a sector average of 51.3%). Of those in employment, 38% were in Professional/ Managerial occupations according to the Standard Occupational Classification. Of those in further study, 77.8% were undertaking a Higher degree (taught) qualification, and 11.1% were undertaking a Professional qualification.
