The programme aims to

- enable students to explore their interest in History and American history, politics and culture through a syllabus that offers a secure foundation in the subjects and the opportunity for intellectual progression and independent study
- foster students' independent thinking and judgement
- provide an intellectually challenging and stimulating curriculum drawing on the research expertise and teaching strengths of the historians within the School of History, Politics and International Relations.
- develop students' skills in close reading and historical and cultural analysis
- develop students' ability to carry out independent research
- develop students' ability to communicate clearly and effectively
- deliver lectures, seminars, workshops and individual supervision
- enable students to develop and demonstrate a range of skills necessary for the study of History and American history, politics and culture at undergraduate and postgraduate level
- enable students to develop the transferable skills necessary for successful career development and effective independent learning

In addition to the aims of the programme outlined for the three-year degree in History and American Studies, the four-year degree also aims:

- to broaden students' learning experience in an international context;
- to widen students' cultural experience by living and studying abroad;
- to develop students' transferable skills in order to enhance their employability;
- Intended learning outcomes for the year will be those of the modules they take at the Higher Education Institution they attend during their year abroad.

BA HISTORY AND AMERICAN STUDIES WITH A YEAR ABROAD

The above four-year degree is also available. Students may only enter the four-year variant of the relevant three-year programme by transferring at the end of the first-year and on the recommendation of the heads of the divisions concerned. Transfer is not automatic, and those wishing to transfer will have to satisfy the American Studies History Board of Examiners in terms of both their academic performance and their good academic standing. The programme structure is as for first, second and final year modules for the three-year programme (above).

There are two routes a student could take:

Either

1) A year spent in North America in which the marks a student obtains count towards their final degree classification. Students taking this option must take their dissertation in American Studies in their final year, AM3001.

2) Students may opt to participate in the Erasmus programme like other joint degree history students:

This programme is assessed as a Four Year Programme with a year out, with the year abroad treated as the 'year out'. The year out does not count towards the final classification, but a student must pass all modules taken during the year abroad to proceed to the final year of the programme. The second and fourth years are used in determining the degree class, according to the standard scheme for three-year programmes. Degrees will be classified using the same scheme as for three- year programmes.

To take part in the History Erasmus programme students must pass all modules in years 1 and 2, and achieve a minimum average mark of 60 in year 2. They must also have learned the language of the destination country, providing the Office with a language certificate as evidence of satisfactory completion of training through the 'Languages at Leicester scheme' or an appropriate alternative. Failure to meet these criteria will lead to the School recommending transfer to the 3-year degree which the student would otherwise have taken.
