7. Programme aims

The programme will cover the history and development of public relations in different parts of the world and provides a theoretical framework for analysing public relations that seeks to contextualise public relations as an academic discipline; this in turn will help students to better understand the structures of public relations in practice and public relations as a social or cultural phenomenon. The programme aims to teach students about the principles and practice of public relations by examining the structure of the PR sector and the way it works. It will examine basic PR strategies and the use of research to inform PR campaigns and to measure their impact and effectiveness. Case studies will be used to illustrate successful and ineffective PR campaigns and teach students how to analyse PR campaigns and to understand the management of crisis communications scenarios. The course will also focus on the structural relationships between PR and the media, strategic communications management and will examine how commercial businesses use PR techniques to promote themselves and how NGOs campaign for social change.

8. Reference points used to inform the programme specification

- QAA Benchmarking Statement
- Framework for Higher Education Qualifications (FHEQ)
- UK Quality Code for Higher Education
- University Learning Strategy
- University Assessment Strategy
- University of Leicester Periodic Developmental Review Report
- External Examiners' reports (annual)
