Summary/Transcript:

Extract taken from: 6m47-7m46s

Definitely I'll give you a typical example when I went to school they all used call me Becky dint they dint they (...) then I started going like from Staveley area started going up North Wingfield and Clay Cross and like town hang around with people from town and they started calling me Becca and from ever since and then they're just different in the way they are the way they speak the way they way they form together but they're like a different breed of people to be quite honest with you (...) what else (...) about it they are definitely different man in every aspect the way they've been brought up and everything yeah

Do you notice there's a lot of different words or phrases or anything like that?

Not as such because they all mean the same you know from like like m/our generation compared to me/ours they all mean the same so unless I go like to Sheff or when I've been going down Mablethorpe there's a different lingo what completely

Further comments:

There are many other interesting features in this interview which don't feature in this extract. This interviewee also h-drops, shows $t \rightarrow r$ (gerrin' mucky), uses owt and nowt, uses lickle for little; tha for you.
