7. Programme aims

The programme aims to provide a thorough grounding in human rights and global ethics, allowing students to explore a range of key political and international theories and concepts. It aims to critically examine the complex links between human rights theory and practice, including the role of values in world politics, and the practical, theoretical and ethical constraints on the achievement of human rights. The programme aims to critically examine the increasingly important relationship between human rights, power, and international politics and analyse the political contexts, uses, and misuses of human rights. Students will have the opportunity to engage with a range of pressing challenges - for example, the ethics of intelligence, contemporary slavery, the limits of citizenship, animal rights, security, and war. They will be exposed to theory and analysis that is at the forefront of debates about how we should live, and about what rights people, groups and states can legitimately claim. The overall aim is to explore, in great depth, the ethical challenges for order, co-operation, participation, and human rights posed by the political realities of competing values, identities and interests, and of the vastly unequal distribution of power and other social, economic, and cultural resources.

The course is designed to equip graduates with a deep knowledge set and skills relevant to employment and career development in government, media, business, NGOs, and any professional context in which cross-cultural sensitivity and ethical awareness are requirements.

10. Special features

The programme draws on different approaches to the broad discipline of Politics and International Relations, specifically, political theory, ethics, international theory and international political analysis. It also allows students to choose optional modules from the School of Law.

Each semester, students must complete 60 Credits worth of modules. If students choose to take law modules, they must take both Law modules on offer (2x 15 Credits) as well as one International Relations module in the same semester (1x 30 Credits). Otherwise, students will take two International Relations modules (2x 30 Credits) in one semester.

To reflect the special focus of the MA programme, students taking this programme will be required to choose a dissertation topic that aligns with the many controversies and issues raised in the study and conduct of human rights and global ethics.

Students are able to engage with opportunities outside of the core programme by attending events organized by HyPIR research clusters, which include prestigious guest speakers which often include practitioners, panel events, an annual postgraduate research conference, lunchtime seminars and staff research peer review sessions, all of which help provide experience for our students to enhance professional transferable skills and develop their awareness of professional academic practices and developments in the wider world with guest speakers.

The programme is based on a social constructivist learning model and includes blended learning environments.

12a. Research-inspired Education

Students on this programme will advance through the four quadrants of the University of Leicester Research-inspired Education Framework as follows:

RiE Quadrant	Narrative
Research-briefed Bringing staff research content into the curriculum.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Research-briefed Our students will be exposed to an inspiring and attractive curriculum in International Relations, Human Rights and Security Studies drawing on the expertise and internationally recognised research produced in the School of History, Politics and International Relations and beyond. All teaching staff are engaged in research and bring their subject expertise and enthusiasm for inclusive, rigorous research into their teaching practice. Through our seminars, workshops and assessments our teaching introduces students to an advanced curriculum and key innovations in our field, situating contemporary developments within appropriate conceptual and theoretical frameworks.
Research-based Framed enquiry for exploring existing knowledge.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Research-based Students are encouraged and supported to draw from a comprehensive range of published research and demonstrate a robust critical engagement with it. Typical assessments include essays, article analysis, policy and conceptual analysis. Seminars involve students working in small groups on tasks that require them to identify, critically analyse, and apply concepts.
Research-oriented Students critique published research content and process.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Research-oriented Our students are taught the key skills necessary to analyse and critically engage with published research, including how it is conceived, produced, used and communicated.
Research-apprenticed Experiencing the research process and methods; building new knowledge	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Research-apprenticed Our students are an important part of our research environment and are encouraged to take an active part in our learning community. MA Students finish the programme with a capstone 15,000-word dissertation on a topic of their choice. They are supported with a dissertation module, to develop their research skills, which helps them transition from being students to independent researchers.

As part of studying at a research-intensive university, students on this programme have the following extra or co-curricular opportunities available to them to gain exposure to research culture:

Our students have numerous opportunities to gain exposure to research culture through extra-curricular events. These include the popular roundtable seminar series, in which roundtable discussions featuring a varying mix of staff and student researchers come together to discuss contemporary issues. Roundtables in the last year have covered topics such as the rise of the far-right and misogyny, and the 2024 U.S. election, and offer research-led opening remarks from staff with relevant expertise, followed by audience questions. In addition, a popular film club offers introductory remarks and a Q&A led by a staff member whose research connects to the film being screened. These events allow students to engage with cutting edge research, and to experience and participate in lively academic discussion. MA students are invited to join HyPIR’s research clusters which bring together academics, doctoral researchers, and PGT students working on projects in similar subject areas (Feminism, Global Ethics and Politics Theory; Intelligence, Security and Strategic Studies; Parties, Parliament, and Public Opinion). Recent cluster activities have included workshops, roundtables, and guided art gallery visits. Our introduction to teaching programme for doctoral students brings research students into the classroom creating opportunities to learn, network and be inspired.

Teaching on this programme will be research-informed (it draws consciously on systematic inquiry into the teaching and learning process itself) in the following way:

The School supports all staff involved in teaching to gain an accredited Higher Education teaching qualification, in which they demonstrate their use of teaching theory to support their own practice and reflect on their current teaching and continuing professional development.

Through routine peer observation of teaching and feedback, teachers in the School are encouraged to reflect on their own practice, and to share, support, and develop as a learning and teaching community. The School holds an annual Teaching Away Day as well as termly teaching meetings for the Politics and International Relations team to develop ideas around best practice. These events allow for in-depth discussion of teaching, including the interface with research and how we support students to become research-briefed, research-based, research-oriented and research-apprenticed.
