This programme follows the standard Scheme of Progression set out in Senate Regulations – see the version of Senate Regulation 5 governing undergraduate programmes relevant to the year of entry.

Students must take the Becoming the Historical Researcher module if they plan to complete a History dissertation in the third year. Students intending to complete the EN3010 Dissertation in English in the final year should not select the Becoming the Historical Researcher module.

For HS coded modules, certain modules include qualifying elements which students have to pass in order to obtain credits for the module. Please refer to individual module specification forms for further information.

In cases where a student has failed to meet a requirement to progress he or she will be required to withdraw from the course

11. Criteria for award and classification

This programme follows the standard scheme of undergraduate award and classification set out in Senate Regulations – see the version of Senate Regulation 5 governing undergraduate programmes relevant to the year of entry.

12. Special features

For the aims, learning outcomes and application criteria for the GCSA Year Abroad please see <https://le.ac.uk/study/undergraduates/courses/abroad>.

12a. Research-inspired Education

Students on this programme will advance through the four quadrants of the University of Leicester Research-inspired Education Framework as follows:

RiE Quadrant	Narrative
	Students in English receive a thorough grounding in knowledge, skills, and methods including critical thinking, reading long and short texts, close analysis, and problem solving. From the first semester onwards, these skills and knowledge are overtly applied to their career paths after university.

Research-briefed Bringing staff research content into the curriculum.	Research-briefed: Core modules introduce students to major genres of English writing (poetry, novels, drama) and critical discussions, establishing a firm basis for development. Skills-based modules develop professional and academic attributes, inviting reflection on their application to a future career opportunity.
Research-based Framed enquiry for exploring existing knowledge.	Research-based: Students are introduced to recent theoretical debates which have influenced the study of English, such as reading and authorship, gender and sexuality, identity and selfhood, class and race, empire and nation. Students identify, compare, and evaluate key theoretical concepts, and consider their applicability to texts of different genres and historical periods.
Research-oriented Students critique published research content and process.	Research-oriented: Our suite of 30-credit modules in historical periods of literature allow students to work with published specialists, analysing research and learning practical skills such as using archives and rare books. Students choose 15-credit Year 3 options designed around staff research specialisms, studied in small-group seminars and debating cutting-edge new work.
Research-apprenticed Experiencing the research process and methods; building new knowledge.	Research-apprenticed: the programme culminates in a Dissertation module, where students design a substantial independent research project in English or Creative Writing, supported by a supervisor with a research specialism in an allied area. They receive training in: a) Ideas and research b) Planning and analysing c) Writing and editing. Students present their findings through a presentation and a long dissertation.

As part of studying at a research-intensive university, students on this programme have the following extra or co-curricular opportunities available to them to gain exposure to research culture:

Visits to Archives and Special Collections are arranged to give students guided, hands-on experience of working with the university's extensive collections of rare books and manuscripts. Special talks and events such as the Centre for Victorian Studies Annual Lecture are publicised to students.

Our annual free literary festival, Literary Leicester, takes place on campus. All students are given programmes in class and are actively encouraged to attend events and talks and participate in workshops.

Teaching on this programme will be research-informed (it draws consciously on systematic inquiry into the teaching and learning process itself) in the following way:

The School supports all staff involved in teaching to gain an accredited Higher Education teaching qualification, in which they demonstrate their use of teaching theory to support their own practice and reflect on their current teaching and continuing professional development.

All teaching staff participate in peer review of teaching or a mentor's review on a regular basis, as well as in peer review of marking. The School Pedagogy Forum enables colleagues to learn about new pedagogical projects and research. English Boards of Studies and away days regularly focus on teaching and learning, informed by scholarship, enabling staff to discuss how best to implement guidance from Education Services in a subject-specific way. Bespoke training is run on specific issues where staff need more support in new and emerging areas, such as AI and Assessment. Workshops offered by national bodies e.g. University English/ the English Association are advertised and staff are encouraged to attend.

13. Indications of programme quality

In a recent Periodic Developmental Review, the panel's report on the School was extremely positive: 'Throughout discussions with both staff and students the Panel noted a very collegial and student-centered approach to all the School's activities. The Panel particularly noted a culture of embedding the assurance of quality and standards into all areas of the School. The enhancement of the student experience was also actively encouraged and fostered. The Panel were impressed with the knowledge of the Chairs of the School's committees and their engagement with managing and enhancing the learning opportunities of students across the provision. The Panel also praised the leadership of the Head of School who actively and knowledgeably oversaw the School's activity. The Panel had confidence in the management of quality assurance and quality enhancement processes in place within the School to assure the quality of the learning opportunities available to students and to comply with both the QAA codes of Practice and the University Codes of Practice.'
