4. Registration periods:

The normal period of registration is three years
The maximum period of registration five years

BA Film and Media Studies with a Year Abroad
The normal period of registration is four years
The maximum period of registration six years

5. Typical entry requirements

A Levels: 300 points (BBB) at A2 (two AS considered in lieu of A2 – different subjects).
International Baccalaureate: Pass with 28 points.
European Baccalaureate: Pass with 77% overall.
BTEC National Diploma: DDM
Access HE courses: 60 credits (including 40 credits minimum at Level 3)

6. Accreditation of Prior Learning

Other than standard credit transfers where students have completed the first year of a comparable programme at another university (60% is the equivalency of standard whilst 120 APEL credits would be the standard transfer), it is not expected that there will be any exemptions for specific modules on the programme.

7. Programme aims

The programme aims:

- To enable students to explore their interdisciplinary interests in Film and Media by providing a framework of high quality research-led teaching.
- To provide students with an intellectually stimulating and challenging programme that will draw and build upon the existing teaching and research strengths of History of Art and Film and Media and Communication.
- To equip students with knowledge and understanding of the interdisciplinary histories of film and mass media in a range of different societies and contexts.
- To facilitate students' awareness of the role and significance of film and mass media within their broader social, economic, cultural and political contexts, including both national and international levels.
- To introduce students to major critical and theoretical issues in the interdisciplinary fields of film and media studies, and to equip them with the appropriate methodologies for exploring those issues.
- To develop students' skills of critical analysis and analytical problem-solving.
- To acquire and develop the ability to communicate ideas clearly and coherently in a variety of forms, including both written and oral.
- To promote students' own independent learning skills and their ability to form independent critical judgements.
- To enhance students' employability by assisting them in the development of the range of subject-specific and transferable skills necessary for successful career development.

In addition, for the 'with a Year abroad' variants

- The 'Year Abroad' variant of this programme is offered in accordance with the University's standard specification for the experiential year abroad variant.

Ability to present information and to articulate concepts and arguments fluently and cogently in an acceptable standard of written English and observing correct scholarly apparatus.	Workshops, seminars, tutorials.	Essays, dissertations examinations, annotated bibliography, book and film reviews, sequence analysis.

iii) Information technology

Intended Learning Outcomes	Teaching and Learning Methods	How Demonstrated?
Demonstrate knowledge of and competency in IT, including theoretical knowledge of its development and uses; competency in word processing and use of multi-media packages for research and presentations. Create an effective website for a film and art event.	Workshops (IT-specific and study skills related), seminars, tutorials, computer practical classes. Skill sessions, online tutorials, guided independent study.	Essays, examinations, dissertations, independent research projects, IT exercises (some modules). Group website and individual web-based projects.

iv) Numeracy

Intended Learning Outcomes	Teaching and Learning Methods	How Demonstrated?
Demonstrate knowledge of numeracy and use of statistics in media-based research. Ability to compose an event budget.	Lectures, seminars, directed reading, tutorials, independent research. Business proposal tutorials and workshop.	Essays, dissertations, independent research projects, numeracy exercises (some modules). Event proposal.

v) Team working

Intended Learning Outcomes	Teaching and Learning Methods	How Demonstrated?
Ability to work in groups and to develop skills in group management, leadership and peer responsibility. Work as a team to devise an event proposal and design a website. Work together to produce a short video.	Seminars, practical exercises – e.g. Film Production and Film and Art modules.	Group presentations, group projects Mock film and art event proposal and website. Short video. Team working together to create a mock film event this year.

vi) Problem solving

Intended Learning Outcomes	Teaching and Learning Methods	How Demonstrated?
Capacity to address critical, theoretical and historical problems, and to identify methods of solving them; formulating answers while understanding that further questions arise.	Lectures, seminars, directed reading, workshops, tutorials, team exercises, film production exercise.	Essays, examinations, dissertations, film production exercise, seminar presentations, group projects.

vii)   Information handling

Intended Learning Outcomes	Teaching and Learning Methods	How Demonstrated?
Gather, process, store, retrieve, present and exchange data relating to film/media theory and practice.	Lectures, seminars, directed reading, workshops, tutorials, team exercises.	Essays, examinations, dissertations, seminar presentations, group projects.

viii)   Skills for lifelong learning

Intended Learning Outcomes	Teaching and Learning Methods	How Demonstrated?
Managing time and resources; meeting deadlines; ability to work independently; ability to work in groups; ability to communicate effectively in both written and oral form; ability to reflect critically on students' own skills and professional development; encouraging the development of independent thinking and original thought. Understand the importance and begin to evidence the development of transferable skills specific to contemporary employment in the creative industries.	Tutorials, seminars, lectures, directed reading, independent research, including online research skills, group exercises.	Demonstrated throughout the programme but demonstrated in particular in the Film and Art event proposal and website (year one), the Working in the Creative Industries portfolio (year two) and the dissertation (year three).

Year Abroad

In addition, for the 'with a Year abroad' variants the additional programme outcomes apply

b) Year abroad

For the Year Abroad variant (for experiential Year Abroad only) the additional progression points apply

11. Criteria for award and classification

This programme follows the standard scheme of undergraduate award and classification set out in Senate Regulations – see the version of Senate Regulation 5 governing undergraduate programmes relevant to the year of entry.

12. Special features

- The programme combines approaches from both Film and Media Studies, allowing students to appreciate connections and differences brought by the two disciplines.
- Opportunities to learn and understand theoretical and historical aspects of the cinematic art in a thriving research environment.
- An introductory course in film production, which provides the elements of basic literacy for those who decide to pursue careers in filmmaking.
  For the Year Abroad variant (for experiential Year Abroad only) the additional Special Features apply

12a. Research-inspired Education

Students on this programme will advance through the four quadrants of the University of Leicester Research-inspired Education Framework as follows:

RiE Quadrant	Narrative
	The Joint degree of Film and Media Studies provides students with a solid grounding in research, critical thinking, and analytical skills. Students are introduced to key concepts and theoretical approaches that help them research and analyse a range of media texts, including but not limited to film, TV, newspaper and magazines. Drawing on staff's research expertise, the programme builds students' confidence to become independent and autonomous learners through gradual exposure to research culture. The pedagogic development and assessment setup of film and English modules are carefully designed to incorporate research-inspired Education Framework that not only bring the latest research content to students but also train students in crucial research skills.
Research-briefed Bringing staff research content into the curriculum.	Research briefed In the first year, students are introduced to key concepts of film studies and media. The core first year modules are informed by staff's research on the topics. This is then followed up in the second year. All of Film and Media's final year modules are designed and delivered by research active staff or practice-into research scholars who actively research in the field.
Research-based Framed enquiry for exploring existing knowledge.	Research based The degree course of Film and Media Studies trains students' academic skills and intellectual curiosity in both fields. Students are not only introduced key concepts related to Film and Media Studies, but also are encouraged to expand their knowledge zones through critically evaluating existing scholarship and primary texts in both film and media across the entire period of their study.
Research-oriented	Research oriented

Students critique published research content and process.	Joint students on Film and Media Studies develop solid academic skills in critical evaluation of both primary and secondary resources. Students are trained to research, explore and analyse existing scholarship on a broad range of topics, key concepts and theories. Students build their academic skills in the first-year core modules and will apply and practice the skills in other modules' assignments.
Research-apprenticed Experiencing the research process and methods; building new knowledge.	Research apprenticed Whilst students are developing their research skills and subject knowledge through learning, the Film and Media Studies degree programme also uses assessment as a tool to help students develop a deep understanding of research process and eventually become independent autonomous learners. Whilst different research components, such as literature survey and academic skills are introduced in year one, students have the opportunity to develop individual research project based on their own interests from the second year onwards. The Independent Research Project require students to draw their academic skills and subject knowledge together to produce a video essay. In the final year, students have the choice between Film and Media dissertation, either of which will further practice their skills by developing an extended research project. Students will engage with self-directed learning of research skills and methods including composing research questions, reviewing existing literature, choosing an appropriate method for undertaking the research and analysis, engaging with scholarly debate, providing evidences to back up opinion and argument, and writing up the findings in formal academic style that is concise, clear, well-focused and coherently structured.

As part of studying at a research-intensive university, students on this programme have the following extra or co-curricular opportunities available to them to gain exposure to research culture:

The programme as part of the wider School of Arts, Media and Communication hosts a number of events based around media production, writing and research throughout the academic year for which undergraduates are invited.

In addition, extra-curricular screening and talks are available to students who wish to explore research topics and apply their critical and research skills in engaging key debates beyond the film curriculum. The department also hosts two film festivals, industry-facing Media Stories and student-led First Frame. Both festivals are public facing and enable students to explore new productions and get in contact with filmmakers through first-hand experience.

Teaching on this programme will be research-informed (it draws consciously on systematic inquiry into the teaching and learning process itself) in the following way:

The School supports all staff involved in teaching to gain an accredited Higher Education teaching qualification, in which they demonstrate their use of teaching theory to support their own practice and reflect on their current teaching and continuing professional development.

All teaching staff members regularly attend education training and pedagogy development workshops to support teaching activities and curriculum development.

All teaching staff participate in pedagogic exercise of peer observation in teaching and assessment to learn from the best practice. The School Pedagogy Forum enables colleagues to learn about new pedagogical projects and research. Film Boards of Studies regularly focus on curriculum development and planning, teaching and learning, enabling staff to discuss how best to implement guidance from Education Services in a subject-specific way. Film staff have also been supported by successful applications for Teaching Development Fund awards, which have enabled them to develop innovative teaching resources and authentic assessments.

13. Indications of programme quality

The programme has received consistently positive reports from external examiners for the wide range of the curriculum, the clear progression across the course of the degree and the high quality of the teaching.

14. External Examiner(s) reports

The details of the External Examiner(s) for this programme and the most recent External Examiners' reports for this programme can be found at exampapers@Leicester [log-in required]

Appendix 1: Programme structure (programme regulations)

The University regularly reviews its programmes and modules to ensure that they reflect the current status of the discipline and offer the best learning experience to students. On occasion, it may be necessary to alter particular aspects of a course or module.
