10. Progression points

This programme follows the standard Scheme of Progression set out in Senate Regulations – see the version of Senate Regulation 5 governing undergraduate programmes relevant to the year of entry.

In cases where a student has failed to meet a requirement to progress he or she will be required to withdraw from the course

For HS coded modules, certain modules include qualifying elements which students have to pass in order to obtain credits for the module. Please refer to individual module specification forms for further information.

a) Course transfers

[n/a]

11. Criteria for award and classification

This programme follows the standard scheme of undergraduate award and classification set out in Senate Regulations – see the version of Senate Regulation 5 governing undergraduate programmes relevant to the year of entry.

12. Special features

At the end of the first year students are eligible to apply to transfer to a 4-year Joint History and American studies degree, with a year abroad either:

1. in the U.S.A.

2. or at one of the European partner institutions of the School of History, Politics and International Relations.

12a. Research-inspired Education

Students on this programme will advance through the four quadrants of the University of Leicester Research-inspired Education Framework as follows:

RiE Quadrant	Narrative
Research-briefed Bringing staff research content into the curriculum.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Research briefed: Staff research is integrated into the curriculum across all three years of the programme. In Y1, survey modules are team taught so that students are introduced to the full range of specialisms from across the department. Y1's People and Places module centres on in-depth microhistories closely related to staff research. In the core Y2 module HS2401 Perceiving the Past, tutors introduce different historical approaches by exploring how they apply to their own field of research. Y2 and Y3 option modules bring staff specialisms into the classroom. The final year dissertation enables students to draw on the expert advice of a supervisor in their field.• Research-based. The Y1 core module Making History involves a framed enquiry into current research in a specific field (Bibliographic Exercise), and Y2's Perceiving the Past embeds a research activity on a case of debated heritage (Contested Heritage Panel). In HS2502 Becoming the Historical Researcher students begin to frame their own dissertation research project, preparing the ground for the Y3 dissertation by exploring existing knowledge.• Research-oriented. All History modules involve close engagement and assessment of published scholarship. This is a key element of essays, but it is also practiced through a group podcast on a major historical debate
Research-based Framed enquiry for exploring existing knowledge.
Research-oriented Students critique published research content and process.
Research-apprenticed

Experiencing the research process and methods; building new knowledge.	(HS1016 Europe), through article critiques, and through seminar discussions of articles or books. Once again, this culminates in the final year dissertation, where students assess, critique and advance beyond current scholarship. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Research-apprenticed. The History programme is designed to prepare students to produce their own historical research in the final year dissertation. We begin in Y1 with an Online Research and Reflection Activity (HS1000) and with close study of primary sources in tutorials and on HS1100 People and Places. On HS2502 Becoming a Historical Researcher, students develop a Research Project Proposal in discussion with an academic expert. In Y3 Special Subjects, three-hour classes involve intensive scrutiny of primary sources with related assignments: a Source-based Analysis and a Document Test. Finally, the 10,000-word research dissertation in Y3 marks the culmination of the programme, when students (with guidance from a specialist supervisor) become independent researchers in their own right.

Sub-section ii: Articulation of research culture in your programme or School/Department.

- b) As part of studying at a research-intensive university, students on this programme have the following extra or co-curricular opportunities available to them to gain exposure to research culture:

The School has a rich culture of extra-curricular research seminars and public lectures, organised by the Centre for Urban History, the Centre for Local and Regional History, the Stanley Burton Centre for Holocaust and Genocide Studies, and the Leicester Medieval Research Centre. These events bring distinguished researchers to campus, and undergraduate as well as postgraduate students are welcome to participate.

- c) Sub-section iii: Articulation of research-informed teaching within your programme.

- d) Teaching on this programme will be research-informed (it draws consciously on systematic inquiry into the teaching and learning process itself) in the following way:

The School holds an annual Teaching Away Day as well as termly teaching meetings for the History team to develop ideas around best practice. These events allow for in-depth discussion of teaching, including the interface with research and how we support students to become research-briefed, research-based, research-oriented and research-apprenticed.

13. Indications of programme quality

The History and American Studies programmes have been consistently praised by external examiners for their geographical, chronological and thematic breadth. The programme American Studies at Leicester has regularly been ranked among the top ten American Studies programmes in the country in the National Student Survey and across the three major University Subject League Tables. It is currently ranked 6th in The Complete University Guide and 8th in The Guardian. Our value added score is currently well above average. The programme has also been regularly praised by external examiners for its breadth, innovation and rigour.

BA HISTORY AND AMERICAN STUDIES WITH A YEAR ABROAD

The above four-year degree is also available. Students may only enter the four-year variant of the relevant three-year programme by transferring at the end of the first or second-year and on the recommendation of the heads of the divisions concerned. Transfer is not automatic, and those wishing to transfer will have to satisfy the American Studies History Board of Examiners in terms of both their academic performance and their good academic standing. The programme structure is as for first, second and final year modules for the three-year programme (above).

There are two routes a student could take:

Either

1) A year spent in North America in which the marks a student obtains count towards their final degree classification. Students taking this option must take their dissertation in American Studies in their final year, AM3001.

2) Students may opt to participate in the Year Abroad programme like other joint degree history students:

This programme is assessed as a Four Year Programme with a year out, with the year abroad treated as the 'year out'. The year out does not count towards the final classification, but a student must pass all modules taken during the year abroad to proceed to the final year of the programme. The second and fourth years are used in determining the degree class, according to the standard scheme for three-year programmes. Degrees will be classified using the same scheme as for three- year programmes.

To take part in the Year Abroad programme students must pass all modules in years 1 and 2, and achieve a credit weighted average of 55% in year 2. They must also have learned the language of the destination country, providing the Office with a language certificate as evidence of satisfactory completion of training through the 'Languages at Leicester scheme' or an appropriate alternative. Failure to meet these criteria will lead to the School recommending transfer to the 3-year degree which the student would otherwise have taken.
