Decisions regarding the accreditation of prior learning are an academic judgement and departments will determine whether the prior learning is at the required level and broadly equivalent to the learning outcomes which would have been assessed during a module.

Departments will determine the currency of prior learning on a case by case basis within an overall requirement that, at the time of application, any prior learning which is more than five years old will not normally be considered current for this purposed

7. Programme aims

The BA Sociology aims to deliver an undergraduate degree that will provide a challenging and high quality academic grounding for graduates moving into an increasingly challenging world of work. It seeks to do this by encouraging students to develop a critical understanding of society, informed by theoretical debates and research at the forefront of the discipline. It aims to facilitate opportunities for students to develop their conceptual understanding in order that they are able to critically evaluate research, scholarship, and different policies and practices that impact upon contemporary society, and apply the knowledge gained from this to their own future practice.

The programme aims to:

- Develop an understanding of the key concepts and theoretical approaches that have developed and are developing in relation to areas such as the relationship between individuals and groups, social action and social structure, biography and history, social institutions and culture, the underpinnings of social order, social inequality and conflict, diverse cultural practices, and the causes and consequences of social change.
- An understanding of the distinctively social standpoint of sociology and the explanatory value of social analysis. This necessarily includes familiarity with the analysis of a variety of forms of human interaction, from micro to macro, their interconnections and their dynamics.
- An understanding of the nature and appropriate use of research strategies and methods in relation to social issues.
- Provide a rigorous, coherent and attractive sociology curriculum that draws on the Department’s research expertise and teaching strengths;
- Provide a stimulating and challenging learning experience for all students;
- Provide students with the skills required for independent learning and develop their capacity to work both with others and autonomously.
- Provide students with a range of both subject specific and transferable skills relevant to life- long learning and employment in a range of occupations;
- Prepare students for progression to Masters’ courses and Ph. D. programme
